Lab

The ICP International Lab is a new and exciting project supporting people who are working with Personal Construct Psychology (PCP), or who are interested in constructivist approaches and looking for development opportunities.

The lab is part of the Institute of Constructivist Psychology (ICP) in Padua, Italy.

ICP is already established as a provider of successful qualification and accreditation programmes for constructivist psychotherapists, and a creator of innovative and exciting international learning opportunities such as the popular Racconti Mediterranei summer schools and Alpine Tales winter workshops.

At these events, and at European and International PCP conferences, we meet many colleagues from around the world with a keen interest in PCP - but not every country can create and sustain a programme of PCP training, development and support ...

... so, welcome to our new International Lab!

We aim to become an international hub for anyone interested in exploring PCP in more depth. Our work will develop through collaboration and exploration, and will aim to be as responsive as we can to the ideas, needs and interests of the emerging PCP community worldwide.

We are already planning a range of development programmes, based in the lovely hills just outside Padua, and starting in spring 2017.

Our programmes will include 'PCP Foundations for Professionals' and 'PCP Approaches to Coaching & Consulting'.

The programmes will be facilitated by leading figures in the world of PCP who have rich experience in their specialist fields, and who enjoy the challenge of constructivist teaching. Our pedagogic approach aims to be true to the spirit of PCP, emphasising exploration and collaboration, dialogue and conversation, critical inquiry, and practical experimentation.
